MINUTES OF MEETINGS

§213. WHAT ARE MINUTES?

Minutes are a record of the business transacted at a meeting of the members or directors of an association or corporation, in the form of written memoranda or notes, kept in a book (or file) that is called the minute book. It is the official memory, recollection, and record of the organization.2

Minutes are a summary, not a verbatim record of everything that was said (ordinarily), and should be objective in nature, not an expression of the personal views of the corporation's secretary.3

The importance of minutes. The importance of such records is made clear in the typical statutory provision of Ohio regarding them:

1702.15. Books, records of account, and minutes.

Each corporation shall keep correct and complete books and records of account, together with minutes of the proceedings of its incorporators, members, trustees, and committees of the trustees or members. Subject to limitations prescribed in the articles or the regulations upon the right of members and charitable corporations to examine the books and records, all books and records of a corporation, including the membership book prescribed by section 1702.13 of the Revised Code may be examined by any member or trustee, or the agent or attorney of either, for any reasonable and proper purpose and at any reasonable time.

The main function of minutes is to serve as an accurate history of the life of the organization.5 When no minutes are kept, parole (oral) evidence of what occurred at a meeting can and will be admitted in evidence in court proceedings. In recent years there has been some dissatisfaction with the failure of some organizations to keep, and make available to properly interested authorities, thorough and accurate minutes and other records; notably dissatisfaction of the tax (exempt) authority with such records of private founda-

Limitations on Examination of Books and Records

Permissive power to prescribe limitations on members' rights to examine minutes and other books and records is stated in the foregoing statute from the Ohio law. Similar provisions are found in some other states, sometimes repeatedly. Thus, another section of the Ohio laws states that provisions may be included in the articles or rules that provide

§219. ROUTINE MEETING MINUTES

Once the organization has settled down to routine operation, most of the specifically important elements shown above in the first (organization) meeting minutes no longer need to be in the minutes.

Minutes of routine meetings should always show the giving of due notice; or else the holding of meetings must be established in schedule style by the bylaws. In addition, the presence of a quorum must be shown, if the meeting is to be legally proper and effective. Signature of the secretary always should appear at the end of the minutes. Counter-signature by another officer also is desirable, as is pointed out above.

Other than this, minutes of routine meetings need contain only a clear and concise narrative of what occurred at the meeting.

For a list of the elements of minutes of a routine meeting, see section 216.

Typical minutes of a meeting of an established nonprofit organization follow. They are from the minute book of a local civic organization.
