On November 30th, 2010, Salt Lake City businessman Earl Black entered the shop next to his home to discover that his wife, Sherry, had been the victim of a homicide. Beaten and stabbed to death with no obvious motive, Sherry's murder quickly became the subject of a major police investigation that sadly remains unsolved to this day.

- This course is an introduction to the tools used in analyzing probative evidence. This type of evidence is divided into three categories: physical, direct and circumstantial. By evaluating the presence or absence of this evidence, it is possible to establish a recognizable pattern of criminal behavior. The first part of the course will examine the theoretical basis of crime assessment and the roles played by Criminological and Psychological continuums. This will be followed by exploring the key roles that power and anger play in crime behavior. The final phase of the course involves discussing applied methods used in identifying the perpetrators of a given crime.

By the end of the course, attendees should be able to adopt a systematic approach to understanding the motives (both implicit and explicit), methods, and opportunities behind committing criminal offenses. They should also understand four major crime sub-types; namely, Power-Assertive, Power-Reassurance, Anger-Retaliatory, and Anger-Excitation. Using this knowledge, attendees should understand the primary crime factors associated with these crime types and be able to apply this understanding to real-life cases. The course itself provides instruction through lectures, reading assignments, and case studies.
